

RECOGNIZE, REFER, SUPPORT: CHILD FIND ESSENTIALS FOR COMMUNITY-BASED EARLY LEARNING PROGRAMS

Community-based early learning professionals are often among the first to recognize when a child may benefit from additional support. This no-cost, virtual training will strengthen participants' understanding of developmental milestones from birth through age five, early indicators of developmental concerns, and the Child Find process. Participants will learn about referral procedures, required timelines, and practical tools, including the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) Milestone Tracker, to support observation, documentation, and collaborative partnerships with families and Local Educational Agencies (LEAs).

Who Should Attend

- Child care center directors and teachers
- Family child care providers
- Head Start and Early Head Start staff
- California State Preschool Program (CSPP) staff
- Transitional Kindergarten teachers
- Early intervention and early childhood special education professionals
- Family resource center staff
- Local educational agency (LEA) administrators and staff
- Anyone who supports young children and their families

What You'll Learn

- Recognize developmental milestones and identify indicators that may suggest a need for additional assessment for children from birth through age five.
- Describe Child Find requirements, including the role of community-based early learning programs, referral procedures, and required timelines.
- Use practical tools, including the CDC Milestone Tracker, to support observation, documentation, and collaboration with families and local educational agencies (LEAs).
